Dear Einstein's Brain:

I gotta say, I don't understand what all the fuss is all about. As far as I'm concerned, you are one of the most overrated brains in history. If you were so smart, how come you didn't foresee that your ideas would result in nuclear bombs? Why didn't you inform Einstein that he should get a decent haircut? Really, you have to admit, most of the concepts you came up with were stolen from other brains. And all those mathematical equations? I think you just made them all up. Nobody really understands them, and those who claim to, are probably trying to justify getting large grants from the government. You should have stayed a patent clerk, you would have done far less harm, and the world would have been spared the horrors you helped create. What good has Physics ever done for mankind? Nothing. What ideas has Physics given us that make my, or anybody else's, lot better? None. Who cares about Physics? Nobody.

So, as you sit there in your jar, being poked, prodded and dissected by other scientists... I hope you're happy. At least you are spared the embarrassment of participating in this current misguided cult of Einstein's Brain.

Yours truly,

Garth Johnson

P.S. Could you please send me an autographed picture? Or at least a smudge marked one?
