Dear Sir:

Thank you for taking time from your, no doubt, busy schedule to read this letter.

As a person with a long time interest in the South Pacific, I am fascinated with the politics and culture of your corner of the globe. Your position as President of this non-contiguous area must me a very demanding one. I have heard some stories of recent unrest in your vicinity, and I hope that any problems have now been peacefully dealt with. With this in mind, I would like to offer my services to you country. I am an educated man with many skills; from construction to teaching (English and Creative Arts). In return for work in any of these areas, all I would require is room, board, and airfare. I sincerely believe that this would be a great trade-off for the both of us.

I am available immediately, and look forward to your response.

Best wishes,

Garth Johnson

P.S. If employment is not available (or even if it is), I would also appreciate an autographed picture of you for my world leader collection.
