Dear Britney:

I hope that it doesn't sound trite when I say that I am your biggest fan. I have everything you have ever recorded, as well as a large collection of your pictures and memorabilia. You seem to be a person very much like myself. Your songs really touch me, mirroring events in my own life. It's amazing that, although we have never met, we share so many similar ideas and interests.

I will be visiting California soon, and I really think that we should meet. I'm sure we'd have a lot to talk about. I have quite a few good ideas for some new songs for you to sing. For instance, I have written a little ditty called "She Doesn't Even Know I Exist" and it's a duet. I'm a pretty good singer myself, and there's nothing I'd like more than to perform this song with you. I think it could really be a really interesting human interest story. You know... because you're famous, and I'm not famous (yet)... and until I wrote this letter you didn't even know I existed, so that if any interviewer asked us about it we could say it was sort of based on real life.

Anyway, I'll be in town sometime next month, and I'll come by and see what you think about working together.

Looking forward to finally meeting you,

Garth Johnson

P.S. Could you please send me an autographed picture for my room?
